Time banking is a pattern of reciprocal service exchange that uses units of time as currency. It is an example of an alternative monetary system.

A time bank, also known as a service exchange, is a community that practices time banking. The mission of an individual time bank influences exactly which services are offered. In some places, time banking is adopted as a means to strengthen the community as a whole. Other time banks are more oriented towards social service, systems change, and helping underprivileged groups. In some time banks, both are acknowledged goals.

The unit of currency, always valued at an hour's worth of any person's labor. Communities use time banking as a tool to forge stronger intra-community connections, a process known as "building social capital".

NEW ACTIVITY

Activity 12: (NATURAL BUILDING & HEALTHY LIFESTYLE)

Date: from February 2017

Place: Nessonas, Greece

Duration: 12 months

Places available: 2

COB organization is evolved in natural building, farming and sustainable living in general. One of our major activities is training in those areas and our farm in Nessonas is a field of experimentation and practical implementation of such techniques and technologies. Also a lot of our workshops take place there.

Tasks of the Volunteer:

- Works maintaining the functionality of the constructions.
- Cultivation activities.
- Experimental constructions in building, energy etc.
- Processing of agricultural products
- Educational activities in our farm and in other places around Greece.

The volunteer`s contribution will be mostly hands on but there will be also training to participate in the organization`s educational activities.

Lodging:

The volunteers will be staying in a building we constructed as a proposal for vulnerable population groups, like refugees for example. This is a very low budget construction but with a very high level of living quality. The heating of the place is achieved with passive solar systems and a very sophisticated wood burning rocket stove. The electric current is not unlimited since it comes from solar panels.

The toilet is composting and the shower also uses a very sophisticated wood burning device. Both are external. There is a common kitchen and the meals are team prepared and received. The diet is vegetarian and based on organic raw materials.

Venue:

The farm is located in the village of Nessonas, a small rural village of 80 habitants. It is 200 meters away from the village with an area of 4000 sq. meter with a total of four natural homes and a lot of other constructions like sauna, hot tub etc. There is plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables around all year long.

Finally there are usually from two to four other people staying in the farm.
